Mediation

Kim Wilson & Co's experienced and efficient Family Law team are available to accept instructions in all areas of Family Mediation, including property and children's matters.

Disputes are an unfortunate reality of life, but the right legal advice and family mediation can help resolve them quickly and effectively.

Mediation is a process where a trained person (the Mediator) helps the parties to a dispute, to negotiate a resolution to their dispute. The Mediator does this by facilitating discussions, and by assisting the parties to identify issues and concerns and to help them identify and explore options to resolve their dispute.

At Kim Wilson & Co we pride ourselves on offering you Dispute Resolution advice that is:

- delivered quickly;
- easy to understand;
- focused specifically on your situation; and
- transparent when it comes to costs.

All our Family and Divorce Lawyers are qualified to represent you during Mediation. Kim Wilson SC, Linda Richardson and Robyn Hadley are Nationally Accredited Mediators (AIFLAM) and are available to accept instructions to act as a Mediator.

Frequently Asked Questions

What if we cannot reach an agreement through Mediation?

If agreement is not reached at Mediation, then you may need to seek Orders from the Family Court. We can assist you to decide if proceedings are necessary. You may also consider Arbitration or some other form of non-Court based resolution.
